

Dog Crate?

Contributed by Bianca Dog
Monday, 10 November 2008
Last Updated Monday, 10 November 2008

As the owner of a dog or cat, you have taken the responsibility of taking care of his/her needs, which include food, shelter and health care. Crating is one way that will assist in caring out this responsibility.

Dogs prefer to keep their sleeping areas clean and dry. Dog crates not only give your pet a sense of home but also help aid in calming hyperactive dogs and with potty training your puppy. Dog crates and carriers are also an important part of travel if you have a pet, large or small. Dog crates are a safe way of transporting your dog in the car, as well as a way of taking him places where he may not be welcome to run freely.

Instinctively, dogs want a personal territory and safe, secure comfort zone of their own to fulfill their need to "den". A dog crate offers a positive solution to house-training and minimizes destructive behaviour.

The most common error when buying a cat or dog travel crate is incorrect sizing. The interior travel crate measurement must be greater than the length of the pet by at least 2 to 3 inches, thus allowing plenty of space for your dog or cat to stand up, turn around, and lie down comfortably with legs stretched out.

Wire dog crates are best if you are using your dog crate primarily at home. Soft-side dog crates work best if you need to take your dog crate with you when traveling, vacationing or just running around town although they can also be used at home as well. By buying a crate for your dog, you are making a cost-effective investment on your pet's welfare and safety.

More often than not, keeping your dog unsupervised can lead to damage properties and worse, may cause threat to their life. Thus, having a reliable dog crate can help you protect your properties and your dog's life as well. With a dog cage, you are also giving your pet the freedom to rule his own world. Just like humans, dogs also love to have their own private place. If you properly train your dog to use a dog crate, he'll think his dog crate is a safe place and will be happy to spend time in his dog crate when needed. Don't be afraid of using one; you are not being cruel as you are helping your dog to feel secure.